TOSCA

Cavaradossi, a painter known for his Republican sympathies, helps Angelotti, former Consul of the Roman Republic who has escaped from prison, to hide. Floria Tosca, a celebrated singer and Cavaradossi's lover and a very jealous woman, believes that Cavaradossi has been meeting the beautiful Marchesa Attavanti, whom he has used as a model for the picture of the Magdalene he is painting in the Church of Sant' Andrea.

Scarpia, the dreaded Chief of Police lusts after Tosca, and inflames her jealousy further by suggesting that Cavaradossi and the Marchesa were interrupted while making love, in the hope that she will lead him to Angelotti's hiding place. He sends his henchman Spoletta to follow Tosca. Spoletta returns having been unable to find Angelotti, but he has arrested Cavaradossi. Tosca, who has been singing in a cantata at the Farnese Palace, arrives in Scarpia's room just as Cavaradossi is led off to the torture chamber; the cries of her lover and Scarpia's threats force her to reveal Angelotti's hiding place.

As a price for Cavaradossi's life, she agrees to give herself to Scarpia. A mock execution with dummy bullets is arranged and Scarpia, who writes a safe conduct pass for the lovers is killed by Tosca as he turns to embrace her. She rushes to the Fortress of Sant' Angelo and explains about the mock execution. The shots ring out and Tosca discovers that even in death she has been tricked by Scarpia; the bullets were real. As Spoletta and his men come to arrest her for Scarpia's murder, she jumps to her death from the battlements.

We'd like to propose a toast.

A toast to an enjoyable visit to the Gaiety.

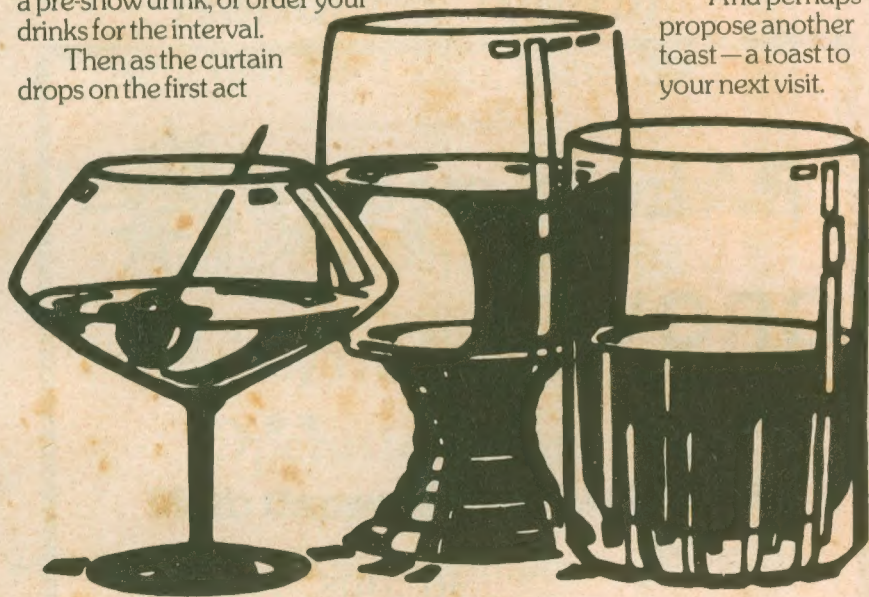

The Gaiety bars are open a half an hour before each performance, so you can start on a pleasant note with a pre-show drink, or order your drinks for the interval.

Then as the curtain drops on the first act they'll be waiting at the table specially reserved for you.

After the show our bars remain open, so you can enjoy further relaxation in congenial company.

And perhaps propose another toast — a toast to your next visit.
